COMMENTS FROM THE TOWN MANAGER'S OFFICE

There was another $23,000 paid in taxes this last week. The total payment is $50,673 or just under 20% of the commitment. That is very favorable for the three week period that the bills have been out.

The Town Road Improvement is finished for Bethel and the work done in Mason Township for the county. The first load of winter salt arrived and is being unloaded. The town has always had the salt come in a regular box car. The salt company suggested that some salt customers are using hopper-type cars. We are trying the hopper car and it seems as though it will work better than the box car.

There is quiet a lot of building going on right now and it seems like a good time to mention building permits. There have been 38 building permits issued this year and the estimated cost of the projects totals $120,000 in buildings and improvements. This amount is larger than the amount for last year and barring any major losses the value of the town should increase some next year.

The expiration date for the 1961 tax liens is December of this year. Notices of the lien, costs, and interest will be sent to all property owners and mortgage holders by the end of the week. There are 19 pieces of property with 1961 liens on them and the total tax due is $973. If the taxes on these properties are not paid by Dec. 27, 1963, then the property will belong to the town.

Michael Houlihan

DR. DAVIDSON SPEAKS AT GOULD ASSEMBLY

Dr. Sidney W. Davidson, of New York City, president of the Board of Trustees of Gould Academy, addressed the students of Gould on Monday morning, following a most successful Parents' Day and Bingham Hall dedication week end. Dr. Davidson was the moving force behind the elaborate program. The following comments come from his speech.

Saturday will remain a great historical occasion at Gould. Everyone who witnessed the dedication ceremonies will long remember what took place. We were blessed by beautiful weather, and victories from both the football and cross-country teams. No one person was responsible for the successful week end. It took the combined efforts of faculty, staff, and students. Many commented on the friendliness present; never have been on a campus like it. There's an atmosphere and spirit here that isn't often found elsewhere.

Gould's physical plant is as fine as any secondary school in the state. It has a top standing scholastically, but the students mustn't rest on their oars — that standing can slip over the years.

Those attending the dedication learned a great deal about the late William Bingham II, in whose memory the new auditorium was dedicated. The Honorable Frances P. Bolton, sister of Mr. Bingham, and Dr. Samuel Proger, both spoke about the humanitarian and philanthropic deeds of the quiet and unassuming gentleman. [The building has been made possible by contributions from the Trustees of the William Bingham II Trust, The Honorable Frances P. Bolton, and Mrs. Elizabeth B. Blossom (his sisters), and other members of his family.] The new auditorium, Bingham Hall, has been erected to the memory of Mr. Bingham, but it is dedicated to the students of the Academy. The stage and equipment located there are comparable to Radio City Music Hall. On the front of the building above the portico are a pair of gold lions, symbolic of the Academy seal. There are made of Philippine mahogany, covered with gold leaf. There will be a hanging lantern on the portico and a tablet listing the names of all the Trustees since 1836.

Dr. Davidson added his personal thanks to those of the other Trustees for the cooperation of everyone toward making the dedication a memorable occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Elwood F. Ireland were guests at Bethel Inn last week end and enjoyed seeing many of their old friends in town. Mr. Ireland was formerly headmaster at Gould Academy.

BETHEL C. OF C. TALKS OF EXPANSION

At its first fall meeting Tuesday evening at the West Parish Congregational Church, the Bethel Chamber of Commerce heard the report of the Study Committee and favorably considered advances.

In introducing the report, the president, Rev. Clifford Laws, noted several reasons for making the study. There are several organizations doing the kind of community promotional work that a Chamber of Commerce should be doing and their origin was the result of the Chamber not being organizationally structured to accept the responsibility. The president said, "Changes for betterment and advance do not happen by themselves or by any magical process. Somebody has to push. Somebody has to care a lot about what happens to a community, and that is where the Chamber of Commerce should be at its best."

The Study Report outlined a series of proposals that would broaden the work of the Chamber. Instead of confining itself to the local community, its membership should be representative of the greater Bethel area, seeking its members from all the surrounding communities. The Report suggested steps that would unite under the Chamber, the several existing promotional organizations. It proposed an increase in dues structure that would also unify the diversity of financial support for promotion and development that now exists. It called to the attention of the Chamber members that there were responsibilities to be assumed in the future that at the present are not being carried out, for example, an active committee of merchants who would handle all matters of policy involving merchants and the public, a code of practices that would bring unity of action on closing hours and holidays and special occasions. The Chamber should assume a much larger responsibility for programs of community and area beautification with signs at expedient approaches to our entire area and increased activity in the promotion of the scenic and natural assets of the area. The Report strongly emphasized that the Chamber as an area organization should go beyond the single effort of advertising ourselves as a resort area on a four-season basis, and give equal emphasis to the work of industrial promotion. For this purpose the Committee recommended that there be a permanent committee of the Chamber whose function would be that of working with all State agencies in the seeking out of new industries for this area.

That the Chamber might have the organizational machinery to carry on such a program of activity, a revised Constitution and By-Laws was presented for consideration.

The report of the Study Committee was well-discussed and the Chamber members present expressed their interest in moving along the lines suggested. Nearly 1,500 students, their parents, alumni and other invited guests from the State of Maine and others sections of the country attended the dedication of Bingham Hall at Gould Academy, Saturday, October 5.

The program took place in the new auditorium in Bingham Hall and was televised closed-circuit to two other auditoria at the school to accommodate the overflow attendance.

The new building is an addition to the campus of the 127-year-old coeducational boarding school for private students and the secondary school for qualified students from the town of Bethel and certain other neighboring communities.

The building is named for the late humanitarian and philanthropist, William Bingham, 2nd. Mr. Bingham was born in Cleveland, but came to Bethel in 1911 and remained there as a resident until his death in 1955. The building is a tribute to his memory and the dedication program highlighted his contributions to Gould Academy during the 46 years that he was a resident of Bethel and the 38 years that he was a trustee of the school.

Sidney W. Davidson of New York, chairman of the Board of Gould Academy, a long-time friend, associate and legal counsel to Mr. Bingham, presided at the dedication.

"I think this school was closest to his heart," said The Honorable Frances P. Bolton, Congresswoman from the 22nd District of Ohio and a sister of Mr. Bingham, who was the featured speaker at the dedication.

Dr. Samuel Proger, President of the Bingham Associates Fund and Physician-in-Chief of Boston's Pratt Clinic-New England Center Hospital, a long-time friend and spokesman of Mr. Bingham also spoke.

The dedication program also included the presentation of a concert organ to the school. The presentation was made by Murray W. Thurston of Bethel, a member of the Board of Trustees of Gould Academy and an alumnus of its class of 1939, in presenting a Hammond concert organ at the Dedication Ceremonies of Bingham Hall.

Remarks of Murray W. Thurston of Bethel, a member of the Board of Trustees of Gould Academy and an alumnus of its class of 1939, in presenting a Hammond concert organ at the Dedication Ceremonies of Bingham Hall.

Dr. Davidson, Honored Guests and Friends of Gould:

From time immemorial it has been the custom to present gifts to those we cherish. Everyone who contributed to this appeal for a gift has had some connection with Gould Academy and the fact that this fund was over-subscribed in a very few days expresses their feelings toward the school. To me it also expresses the gratitude to Mr. Bingham, felt by us all, for the countless things he has done for the school and community.

On behalf of the parents, faculty, trustees, alumni, students and friends of Gould, it is a pleasure to present to the Academy this Hammond Concert Organ whose music we have enjoyed this afternoon.

Remarks of Edmond J. Vachon, Headmaster of Gould, at the Dedication Ceremonies of Bingham Hall.

Thank you, Mr. Thurston. It is a pleasure for me to accept on behalf of the Trustees, Faculty and Students, this beautiful instrument made possible by the contributions of Trustees, Faculty, Parents, Alumni, Students and Friends of Gould. This project was conceived over a year ago by the Student Activity Council and Faculty Advisers of the Academy. Today marks the successful culmination of those who dreamed and of those who played a part in the realization of that dream.

In Genesis Chapter 4—Verse 21, the Bible records the name of Jubal as the first known organist. In a collection of hymns by John Haynes Holmes reference is made to Jubal as follows:

Old Jubal twanged the bowstring,
And heard a humming sound;
He cut wild feds, and in them
Sweet arias he found:
He stretched raw skins, and beat them

In rude and rhythmic roar;
And lo, the tides of music
His waking soul o'ersaw.
From age to age new Jubals
In ecstasy have wrought,
In lute and pipe and sackbut
New melodies have sought:
Till now, in pulsing organ
In orchestra and choir
They lead the ardent spirit
To conquer and aspire.

Jubals there have been and more there will be, some in this hall and some elsewhere.

Speech of The Honorable Frances P. Bolton, Member of Congress from 22nd District of Ohio, at Dedication Ceremonies of Bingham Hall:

It is now many years since I first came to Bethel to spend a short few months under Dr. Gehring's care. My brother Will had been here several years benefitting greatly. It was a rare and wonderful experience altogether. Bethel in winter with snow three feet at least on the level and the glass never anywhere near zero. And so dry! Last year when Cleveland had "a good old fashioned winter" it was quite beautiful but oh, such high humidity.

One experience up here that I have never forgotten was a glorious bright day with little or no wind and the thermometer about 30 degrees below zero. I strapped on my snowshoes and took off for the hemlock woods in just one sweater and a seal skin cap to cover forehead and ears. The unbelievable beauty and the strong shadows, the bright bits of sun—the silence! I still feel it in the deep recesses of my soul.

Another unforgettable and amusing moment was when I was walking up Main Street. My brother was coming towards me. As he came near he bent over, took a lot of snow in his hand and rubbed my nose in it. I was furious! And how he laughed. "Maybe you'd rather have a frozen nose!"

I think it was because I had been up here with him that he tolerated me as did none of the rest of us. We had many talks, he and I, about the nursing school at Rumford, the possibilities in Boston, the great need here in Maine for doctors, for nurses. During the war years we did not talk of carnage, though one felt him supersensitive to its vibrations. But when I went to Europe afterwards he asked me to look up several of the people he had been helping. I found them legion.

He had built what he hoped would be a woman's medical school in Constantinople. His disappointment was great when Attaturk (Kamil Pasha) refused to have it so used. Quietly Will followed its course and rejoiced when it became a girls' school. One year my duties took me to Istanbul. Of course, I went up onto the hill and into the school. There in the hallway was a bronze plaque:

Built by William Bingham
In memory of his mother
Mary Payne Bingham.

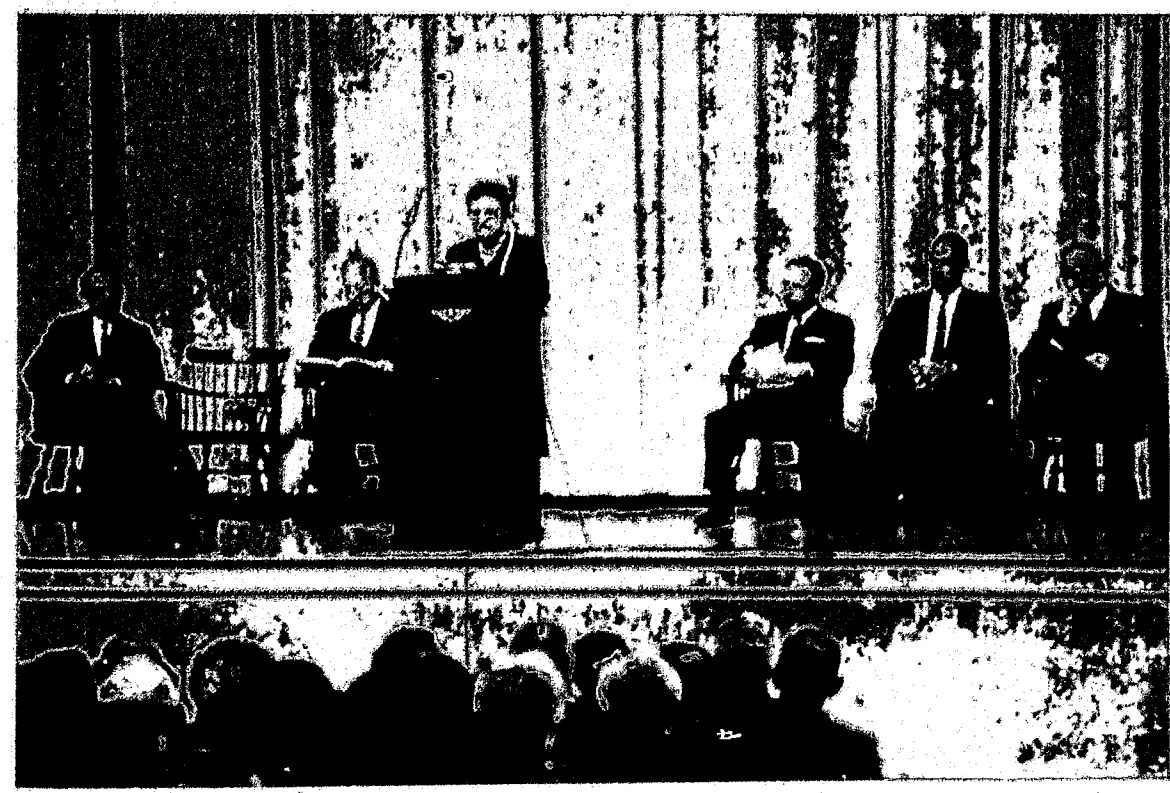

To every girl there he was a real person, a vivid reality. They welcomed me as one is seldom welcomed, asking affectionate questions about him that were infinitely touching.

A building for a girls' school on the Bosphorus, his name on a bronze plaque in the hall. Another bronze plaque in a lovely little Natural History Museum in Santa Barbara where he spent some years.

And this building we are dedicating to his memory today . . . How far he reached out in his constant endeavor to help—how wide were his interests, how broad his sympathies! how deep his understanding!

But I think this school was closest to his heart. He loved Bethel. He had an abiding respect and affection for the men and women here who were building strength and simplicity and courage into the warp and woof, the bricks and mortar of their young people, who

Remarks of Dr. Samuel Proger, President of the Bingham Associates Fund, Physician-in-Chief of the Pratt Clinic-New England Center Hospital (Boston) and Professor and Chairman of the Department of Medicine, Tufts University School of Medicine, at Dedication of Bingham Hall:

Because of my long and happy association with Mr. Bingham in the years from 1932 to 1955, I have the honor of speaking briefly about him on this occasion, one that marks another step forward in the progress of Gould Academy. I am especially grateful for the opportunity to pay tribute to the memory of Mr. Bingham who lived in these beautiful surroundings; so quietly, so humanely, and with such grace as to provide a striking contrast to all that we associate with our mechanistic and morose age. His name is attached to this building, but his spirit permeates the whole of the Academy. For he had a long and deep interest in all of the affairs of this school, and he did much to make its growth and development possible.

Although Mr. Bingham lived a life of comparative seclusion, I think I have some measure of this sensitive and kind person from the many contacts which I had with him over the years.

He was born into a family of great prominence and great accomplishments. When I met him, he was already active in a career motivated by compassion for, and a desire to help the sick and the underprivileged. His background was such that he might easily have succumbed to the inertia of custom. Instead he was stirred by the imaginative and the new especially when they gave promise of being more effectively helpful to more people.

Some of my impressions of Mr. Bingham are contained in the program notes which you have. There is much that can be said about this remarkable man, through whom so many benefited. There were persons as individuals who knew that their good fortune and their opportunity to move forward came from Mr. Bingham. There were many more who benefited equally though unknowingly.

Their were the benefits bestowed by an unknown benefactor. To all, the fact of his life and of his kindly concern for their welfare meant that they were able to lead better lives.

Mr. Bingham appeared to shield himself from people, living just a bit above the melee; yet he dedicated himself and his possessions to those people and their problems. He communicated with only a small circle of intimates, who took care of his business needs, his personal and his medical requirements, but nevertheless he was extremely well informed about what was going on in the world, and acutely aware of even the minutest details relating to the affairs that touched his own interests. Philanthropy was his mission and he pursued it with an inspired and humble devotion.

Today when there are fewer who remember his person there are more who know and experience the results of his beneficence. For just as at night after one has been contemplating the sky for a while the number of

DR. PROGER from Page Three stars seem to have increased, so today as we contemplate the good that Mr. Bingham set in motion its magnitude is found to have grown. His influence is now more widely felt than ever, his name more highly esteemed. He continues to live in the spirit, and grow in the good, that he created.

Like most people Mr. Bingham was a person of paradoxes. Thus he was at the same time simple and complex, tender and rigid, gentle and forceful, spontaneous and restrained. He was gracious and accommodating yet demanding and stubborn.

His was a life that appeared often in his view to have no molehills, there were only mountains. This at times created unnecessary difficulties, to be sure, but among the mountains were such as the Gould Academy, the Pratt Clinic, and New England Center Hospital, and the Bingham Program for the advancement of medicine.

Mr. Bingham was too wholesome to be seduced by wealth and he was not given to shoddy enthusiasms. In the area of his philanthropies he seemed instinctively to strike at the essentials. A sociologist friend of mine once remarked that all of the trouble of the world can be laid at the feet of the sick, the poor, and the bad. It was to combat the evils of illness, poverty and crime that Mr. Bingham in his own manner set about to promote health and to advance education. He could hardly have selected a higher aim, for surely the substance of a good and truly civilized society depends upon health and education with, of course, a religion to provide a moral guide, an ethical code and an abiding faith. Mr. Bingham created his own department of health, education and wel-from Page Three auditorium, thanks to the many persons who have made this Hammond Concert Organ possible. To all we are greatly indebted and to all we register our deepest appreciation.

Members of the Board of Trustees, Distinguished Guests, Parents, Alumni, Faculty and Students.

I wish to share with you the many greetings which came by letter and formal certificate from individuals and sister institutions for this memorable occasion in Gould history. They convey, each in its own way, friendly wishes of which the following is an example, and I quote: "It is a pleasure to extend sincere greetings to the Headmaster and the Board of Trustees of Gould Academy on the occasion of the dedication of Bingham Hall, Saturday, October fifth, 1963." These are gratefully acknowledged and appreciated.

Bingham Hall, as we have it today, is truly and not merely politely, the work of many: planners, designers, builders, philanthropists—all putting together a collection of specific needs to add to the already extensive facilities of Gould. Its completion today is only the preface to its beginning to serve the academic, cultural and recreational needs of the school community.

That the new facility should be named Bingham is highly appropriate. Nations have perpetuated the names of gods and men in the stone of temples for centuries. Nations, cities, cathedrals, structures devoted to civic works, the arts and sciences, and education, all bear names of men and women, outstanding by their various contributions to many fields of endeavor. As other institutions have their Butler, Lowell, Angell and Elliot, so has Gould her Bingham, the memory of whom time can never dim. Parson Gould gave this institution birth more than a century ago but the name of Bingham has given it life. In St. Paul's Cathedral in London, words carved in stone describe the contributions of the great English architect, Sir Christopher Wren. These have often been paraphrased and on this memorable occasion I should like to take such liberty again by saying: "If ye would seek a monument to the name of Bingham, look around you on the campus of Gould Academy."

fare. It was as effective as it was unobtrusive, as lasting as it was well conceived.

He was thoughtfully, and it appears wisely, selective in his philanthropies. That was no mean accomplishment, charitable impulses being what they are. Thus at one extreme there are those whose charitable impulses seem to be under no control whatsoever. They are the indiscriminate and the sentimental givers and they seem to derive a vague satisfaction from just giving. At the other extreme are those in whom these impulses are completely under control. Only the government can force such people to help others, that is, through tax funds. Most people, of course, fall somewhere between these extremes. The elite of the givers, however, are those like Mr. Bingham whose charitable impulses are suitably selective. In their giving they combine the questing heart with the inquiring mind. They are the discriminate and warm hearted givers whose giving is as purposeful as a physician's prescription and with the same hope of helpfulness.

Mr. Bingham's efforts to be helpful were not only purposeful, they were to an extraordinary degree selfless. Charles Lamb wrote that the greatest pleasure he knew was to do a good action by stealth, and to have it found out by accident. Yet such was the purity of Mr. Bingham's philanthropies that he actually preferred that they not be discovered.

Let me illustrate certain aspects of his charity as I saw them at the Pratt Clinic and New England Center Hospital. First, after a careful and critical study he provided a large sum of money for the construction and maintenance of the building. Then he saw to it that a great number of people whose individual needs were from time to time brought to his attention, were cared for in the hospital at his expense. He himself would not accept any preferential treatment in what was in effect his own hospital. Thus I can recall a remark that he made to me at a time when he was to be admitted, and there was a shortage of beds. "I shall wait to come in," he said, "until you are sure that the bed that I am to occupy is not being denied someone else." He would follow with great care and in considerable detail the impersonal business affairs of the hospital and with equal care the personal progress of the particular patients whom he was helping. And yet despite his intimate involvement in everything connected with the hospital, he seemed almost embarrassed by the simple acknowledgements of gratitude to him that was contained in a modest plaque in the building. Such was the nature of his philanthropy, such was the quality of the man.

To a considerable degree Mr. Bingham lived alone as I have indicated but he did not live for himself. For because he lived, there is a school of this character and magnitude, there is a medical center of increasing importance in New England, there is a regional program in Maine that continues to grow and prosper in the field of health promotion and there are in other areas innumerable evidences of his consuming concern for human welfare. From this concern flowed much in his lifetime. From this concern will continue to flow even more in the years to come; all this, hopefully to make our tormented age a bit less burdensome, perhaps even more worthy of the qualities exemplified by the man whose memory we honor here today—a man of whom it may simply be said that he was good and he was helpful. Indeed it may be that all else that can be said of the virtues of man is little more than commentary, as is perhaps all else that I might say of Mr. Bingham.

The following is a telegram received by Mr. Sidney W. Davidson from Mrs. Blossom, sister of Mr. Bingham.

To Board of Trustees—Mr. Sidney Davidson, Oct. 4, 1963, Cleveland, Ohio.

There is nothing really difficult if you only begin. Some people contemplate a task until it looms so big, it seems impossible, but the Trustees just began knowing that somehow it could get done. It is fine to know you have achieved the goal you have been working toward all these years, and we wish you continued success.

The following is a telegram received by Headmaster Edmond J. Vachon of Gould Academy from His Excellency John H. Reed, Governor of the State of Maine, on Oct. 5: "Please convey the official greetings of the State of Maine together with my personal congratulations to the Board of Trustees and faculty of Gould Academy on the occasion of the dedication of Bingham Hall on Saturday. The State of Maine is proud of the record that Gould Academy has established in secondary education and is grateful for the contribution which William Bingham, 2nd, has made unselfishly to this institution. Bingham Hall will be a most important asset to the campus of the Academy. I deeply regret that my schedule will not permit me to join you for the dedication. Please convey my regards to the Honorable Frances P. Bolton, member of Congress, and all those in attendance. John H. Reed, Governor, State of Maine."

Prayers of the Reverend David N. Beach, Pastor of the Community Church, West Dennis, Massachusetts at Dedication Ceremonies for Bingham Hall: Prayer of Invocation

O God, the light of the souls who seek all truth and the joy of those who follow thy will, bless this goodly school in the plans and works which we consummate this day. Help those who labor here generation after generation in their indispensable quest, so ancient and so novel, so individual and so universal; and that their ardor be both its own reward and the very life of thy kingdom and of the commonwealth of man.

Let the words of this hour and the efforts of every hour here bring thy servants closer and closer to thee, who art our help in ages past and our hope for years to come. In His name we pray, who was and is the Light of the World: Amen.

Prayer of Dedication

O God, before whom the generations rise and pass away, and who givest to all the opportunities of wise discernment, of disciplined reflection and of devoted choice, we praise thee in all humility for the vast and varied services of those who use their opportunities well. Many are those whose choices and gifts have enlarged the life of this school; and we praise thee and them for their gifts.

As we look about us we notice particularly the gifts made possible by the wise discernment, the disciplined reflection and the devoted choices of thy servant, William Bingham, 2nd. His gifts stand forth and call him blessed; and he, being dead, yet liveth richly in the benefactions he chose and in the plans he left behind.

We beseech thee to bless this school in the benefactions of all who love it; and particularly do thou bless this school in this building. In its earlier condition it has already served long and well. Grant that in its enlarged condition it may serve still more adequately for many generations of students.

To that purpose, we now dedicate this building in thy holy name.

Grant that every generation may so appreciate this building and all which they find here, that their heritage of brick and stone and steel, of honor and opportunity and example, may lead many, if not all, to wise discernment, disciplined reflection and devoted choice.

Help those who have eyes to see; help those who have ears to hear; help those who have hearts to love; and so lead us and all who follow us from knowledge to wisdom, from wisdom to devotion, from devotion to ardor, from ardor to delight. And so may the joy of each hour in thy service bring us that peace which the world can neither give nor take away.

We pray all this, and much more which only thou hearest, in the name of the Great Teacher who chose and was this very way of wisdom and devotion, of ardor, delight and peace: Amen.

MRS. BOLTON from Page Three

in so many way had become his. He had no children of his own—but his heart encircled literally thousands.

Much that he made possible will never be fully revealed, for he had no desire to be known, indeed, he shrank from having his name attached to his giving. His was a stewardship seldom found and very precious. It gave him the ability to express the deep need of his soul to help people.

Yes, his was a strange life, separated from the world—but it was full of quiet activities that reached out into a field of dynamic action whose influence will long be felt in many places. Super sensitive he shrank from the ugliness of the world, building a wall around himself that few ever penetrated. But to him that wall was a window through which he saw with exceeding clarity the needs of men and he did what he could to build opportunity. Yes, he was considered eccentric, but he was respected by all who shared his work. His brilliant mind, his quick grasp of the most complex matters, his amazing memory, his wise judgment—in those areas he stood head and shoulders above most men—and what wit and humor was his!

Coming as I have from Washington it is impossible for me not to speak for a moment or two about this country of ours, which is in the midst of possibly the most dangerous period of her life. Certainly the world has become filled with misunderstanding, with jealousy and hatred to such a degree that it would seem impossible for us to escape a hot war and possible annihilation.

The young people who will come to Bethel, who will be going in and out of this beautiful building will, I sincerely hope, be very serious in their studies. Our Country needs the rugged strength of Maine. She needs the fact-finding courage that Maine seems to develop in her children. Certainly there is no one in the Congress who more beautifully demonstrates these attributes that Senator Margaret Chase Smith, who had hoped so very much to be with us today, but who could not leave her post.

I am not surprised that A. T. & T. chose the location only a stone's throw from where we are for its Telstar Center. I love to think that the land they bought was purchased from Bethel people. There is a clearness to the air here that one finds less and less as one goes from the Atlantic to the Pacific; from Canada to the Gulf. I have wondered sometimes what it was that made you Maine people aware that the World is a place in which all of us find ourselves and where eventually, we hope we may live in friendly neighborliness. Oh, yes, you have what we used to call "Isolationists" among us but not in such numbers as we have them in Ohio. (Alas!)

As I sit on the Foreign Affairs Committee day after day, week after week, month after month, listening first to one and then to another on matters relating to Foreign Aid, the ultimate disarmament of all men;

to the shifting of the border between Texas and Mexico. As I listen to the angry reactions to the whole matter of Cuba, and am forced to recognize the tragic fact that the Communists now have a beachhead in this hemisphere, I am increasingly aware of the privilege that is mine to have been in the Congress for 23 years—able to watch the changes come over us and our world. I am constantly reminded that the one unchanging law is the law of Change.

I find it very difficult when I am forced to realize that countries who were, once, our good friends are now unfriendly; that we seem to be earning suspicion and coldness on every hand. We, who really want nothing except to see our neighbors, our friends, progressing towards the freedom that has been ours.

Most people are so very reluctant to accept change and at the moment everything about us—above us and under us—is changing. Who would have believed that the discovery that broke the atom could lead us so rapidly into areas dangerous to all men? Who could have believed that we may have to face unspeakable horror if anyone perchance shoots off that bomb?

I sincerely hope that here at Gould Academy it will be made possible for all the students to get a deep sense of the new universe. Each day, each hour—something shows us its magnificence. So far, we have not proven ourselves careful stewards of the mysteries and marvels in which we now find ourselves. New energies appear on every hand, strange phenomena greet us with every new day. I confess to a certain envy of these young people who have the chance to learn while they are still young, something about the mysteries of creation and of destruction—as we never had.

We Members of the House were relieved indeed when, on our return last January, we were met by that very wonderful inscription "In God we Trust." 12 bronze letters bolted into the marble over the Speaker's chair. The House, at least, has declared itself. You young people will have to decide whether you want to live under such a motto or in a country that has forsaken its God. You will have to decide!

Quiet, simple, sweet, and strong was the man who built this first gymnasium. We hope that this second building will be in keeping with the beauty and the sensitivity of his heart and mind and soul.

It is my hope that whoever comes over this threshold will find something of his spirit here. May the Infinite guide you and guard you and may the Light of His life be about you and within you always.

Prayers of the Reverend David N. Beach, Pastor of the Community Church, West Dennis, Massachusetts at Dedication Ceremonies for Bingham Hall: Prayer of Invocation

O God, the light of the souls who seek all truth and the joy of those who follow thy will, bless this goodly school in the plans and works which we consummate this day. Help those who labor here generation after generation in their indispensable quest, so ancient and so novel, so individual and so universal; and that their ardor be both its own reward and the very life of thy kingdom and of the commonwealth of man.

Let the words of this hour and the efforts of every hour here bring thy servants closer and closer to thee, who art our help in ages past and our hope for years to come. In His name we pray, who was and is the Light of the World: Amen.

Prayer of Dedication

O God, before whom the generations rise and pass away, and who givest to all the opportunities of wise discernment, of disciplined reflection and of devoted choice, we praise thee in all humility for the vast and varied services of those who use their opportunities well. Many are those whose choices and gifts have enlarged the life of this school; and we praise thee and them for their gifts.

As we look about us we notice particularly the gifts made possible by the wise discernment, the disciplined reflection and the devoted choices of thy servant, William Bingham, 2nd. His gifts stand forth and call him blessed; and he, being dead, yet liveth richly in the benefactions he chose and in the plans he left behind.

We beseech thee to bless this school in the benefactions of all who love it; and particularly do thou bless this school in this building. In its earlier condition it has already served long and well. Grant that in its enlarged condition it may serve still more adequately for many generations of students.

To that purpose, we now dedicate this building in thy holy name.

Grant that every generation may so appreciate this building and all which they find here, that their heritage of brick and stone and steel, of honor and opportunity and example, may lead many, if not all, to wise discernment, disciplined reflection and devoted choice.

Help those who have eyes to see; help those who have ears to hear; help those who have hearts to love; and so lead us and all who follow us from knowledge to wisdom, from wisdom to devotion, from devotion to ardor, from ardor to delight. And so may the joy of each hour in thy service bring us that peace which the world can neither give nor take away.

We pray all this, and much more which only thou hearest, in the name of the Great Teacher who chose and was this very way of wisdom and devotion, of ardor, delight and peace: Amen.

MRS. BOLTON from Page Three

in so many way had become his. He had no children of his own—but his heart encircled literally thousands.

Much that he made possible will never be fully revealed, for he had no desire to be known, indeed, he shrank from having his name attached to his giving. His was a stewardship seldom found and very precious. It gave him the ability to express the deep need of his soul to help people.

Yes, his was a strange life, separated from the world—but it was full of quiet activities that reached out into a field of dynamic action whose influence will long be felt in many places. Super sensitive he shrank from the ugliness of the world, building a wall around himself that few ever penetrated. But to him that wall was a window through which he saw with exceeding clarity the needs of men and he did what he could to build opportunity. Yes, he was considered eccentric, but he was respected by all who shared his work. His brilliant mind, his quick grasp of the most complex matters, his amazing memory, his wise judgment—in those areas he stood head and shoulders above most men—and what wit and humor was his!

Coming as I have from Washington it is impossible for me not to speak for a moment or two about this country of ours, which is in the midst of possibly the most dangerous period of her life. Certainly the world has become filled with misunderstanding, with jealousy and hatred to such a degree that it would seem impossible for us to escape a hot war and possible annihilation.

The young people who will come to Bethel, who will be going in and out of this beautiful building will, I sincerely hope, be very serious in their studies. Our Country needs the rugged strength of Maine. She needs the fact-finding courage that Maine seems to develop in her children. Certainly there is no one in the Congress who more beautifully demonstrates these attributes that Senator Margaret Chase Smith, who had hoped so very much to be with us today, but who could not leave her post.

I am not surprised that A. T. & T. chose the location only a stone's throw from where we are for its Telstar Center. I love to think that the land they bought was purchased from Bethel people. There is a clearness to the air here that one finds less and less as one goes from the Atlantic to the Pacific; from Canada to the Gulf. I have wondered sometimes what it was that made you Maine people aware that the World is a place in which all of us find ourselves and where eventually, we hope we may live in friendly neighborliness. Oh, yes, you have what we used to call "Isolationists" among us but not in such numbers as we have them in Ohio. (Alas!)

As I sit on the Foreign Affairs Committee day after day, week after week, month after month, listening first to one and then to another on matters relating to Foreign Aid, the ultimate disarmament of all men;

to the shifting of the border between Texas and Mexico. As I listen to the angry reactions to the whole matter of Cuba, and am forced to recognize the tragic fact that the Communists now have a beachhead in this hemisphere, I am increasingly aware of the privilege that is mine to have been in the Congress for 23 years—able to watch the changes come over us and our world. I am constantly reminded that the one unchanging law is the law of Change.

I find it very difficult when I am forced to realize that countries who were, once, our good friends are now unfriendly; that we seem to be earning suspicion and coldness on every hand. We, who really want nothing except to see our neighbors, our friends, progressing towards the freedom that has been ours.

Most people are so very reluctant to accept change and at the moment everything about us—above us and under us—is changing. Who would have believed that the discovery that broke the atom could lead us so rapidly into areas dangerous to all men? Who could have believed that we may have to face unspeakable horror if anyone perchance shoots off that bomb?

I sincerely hope that here at Gould Academy it will be made possible for all the students to get a deep sense of the new universe. Each day, each hour—something shows us its magnificence. So far, we have not proven ourselves careful stewards of the mysteries and marvels in which we now find ourselves. New energies appear on every hand, strange phenomena greet us with every new day. I confess to a certain envy of these young people who have the chance to learn while they are still young, something about the mysteries of creation and of destruction—as we never had.

We Members of the House were relieved indeed when, on our return last January, we were met by that very wonderful inscription "In God we Trust." 12 bronze letters bolted into the marble over the Speaker's chair. The House, at least, has declared itself. You young people will have to decide whether you want to live under such a motto or in a country that has forsaken its God. You will have to decide!

Quiet, simple, sweet, and strong was the man who built this first gymnasium. We hope that this second building will be in keeping with the beauty and the sensitivity of his heart and mind and soul.

It is my hope that whoever comes over this threshold will find something of his spirit here. May the Infinite guide you and guard you and may the Light of His life be about you and within you always.

GOULD ACADEMY

One of several traveling Art Exhibits from the University of Maine will be on display at Gould Academy for about two weeks. This is a good example of variety and work, and will be shown on the second floor hallway of Hancroft Hall.

The sophomore class at Gould recently elected officers for the year 1963-64. They are: President, John Lombard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Lombard; Vice-President, Douglas Boynton, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Boynton; Secretary, Martha Laws, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Clifford Laws, Bethel.

Student Activity Council announces the result of the voting for senior class officers: President, John Young; Vice President, Donald R. Young; Secretary, Carol Flint; and Treasurer, Joel Nichols.

Girls' Sports

Saturday morning brought competition to Gould for the girls in three sports—archery, hockey and tennis. Kents Hill was the opposing school. The results were as follows: Archery—Kents Hill 2400, Gould 1714; Hockey—J. V. Kents Hills 0, Gould 1; Varsity Kents Hill 8, Gould 1; Tennis—Kents Hill 3, Gould 4.

This gave Gould a split as far as wins were concerned—taking the tennis and JV hockey and giving Kents Hill archery and varsity hockey.

Gould 19—Oxford-Hockey 40
Vaughan Damone set a new course record in leading the Huskies to a 19-40 decision over the Vikings of Oxford Hills. The time for the 2.3 mile course was 13:34.5. It was Damone's second win of the year over Greg Goodspeed, who came in second. He was followed by four Gould runners who finished closed behind.

Gould 14—Old Orchard 6
In the toughest battle of the year Gould came through with touchdowns in the third and fourth periods to defeat the Seagulls of Old Orchard 14 to 6.

In the first period there were no serious scoring threats as the deepest penetration was by Gould to the OOB 17 yard line. The Huskies put on two concentrated drives in the second period only to have them stopped on the one yard line and the three yard line.

In the third period the Hus-

The next meeting will be Oct. 23 at Gertrude Hutchins', with Barbara Brown as co-hostess. At this meeting, Helen Varner will talk on her recent trip to Canada.

CONGREGATIONAL COUPLES CLUB TO MEET

The Couples Club of the West Parish Congregational Church will hold its first fall meeting at Garland Chapel, Monday, Oct. 14, at 6:30 p. m.

Rev. Clifford Laws will speak on the outcome of the Fourth Synod Conference held in Denver, Colo., this past summer.

The meeting and program will follow a pot luck buffet dinner.

Kies scored first with a 69 yard march that included runs by Corey Brown of 42 and nine yards. The goal line was crossed on a 12 yard pass play—Mike 'Christian to Corey Brown. Jim 'Coriveau place-kicked the extra point.

The visitors came back to score in nine plays on a 52 yard march. The TD resulted in a 14-yard pass—Gordon Doe to Jim Prendergast. The attempted place-kick was blocked.

The final Gould TD came after a march from the OOB 38-yard line where the Seagulls had punted out of bounds. A pass for 14 yards—Christian to Brown and a Brown run of 13 yards put the ball on the 11 yard line. On the next play, 'Coriveau skirted his own right end for the TD. The place-kick was again good and the Huskies led 14-6. It was the third consecutive win and helped make Parents' Day and Dedication Day all the more enjoyable—for perhaps the largest crowd to have ever congregated on Alumni Field.

CREWS FIGHT WOODS BLAZE AT SUNDAY RIVER

Firefighters spent most of the week end battling a stubborn forest fire about a mile into the woods at Sunday River. The blaze of undetermined origin burned over an area of about four acres of cut-over land.

The fire was located where Roscoe Swain had a crew, but no one was reported as having worked on Saturday, when the fire was discovered.

Firefighting crews from Newry, assisted by a pumper, went to fight the blaze. Late Saturday afternoon the Bethel fire department sent a pumper, tank truck and men to assist the crew. The State Forestry Department also sent a crew and a tank truck.

Crews worked throughout the night to extinguish the stubborn blaze. Water had to be hauled about a mile into the woods. The area was reportedly very dry, and the fire was burning in the ground. It is believed the rest of the week.
